

- The pope has authority over all Christians by the medium of the bishops who have authority over particular churches.
- The bishops have authority over their particular churches by a subordinate and limited participation in the universal authority of the pope.

Figure 1. The Roman Catholic Church as divinely constituted